HUNDREDS of students and teachers from the Far North Coast converged on Murwillumbah High School on Friday to take part in an enrichment day for HSC Industrial Arts students.

The guest presenters were HSC markers from Sydney with specialised expertise in the various areas studied in Industrial Technology - Timber, Metal, Graphics, Automotive and Multi-media.

Students got the latest information about what markers are looking for in the projects they submit next year.

Students had workshops to improve their knowledge and skills in Industry Study, a large component of their HSC written exam.

The NSW Institute of Industrial Arts and Technology Education have provided financial support for the enrichment day, significantly reducing the cost for those attending.

Organiser of the day, Murwillumbah High School teacher, Martin Naughton said the day gave students from the region a chance to access the sort of information and expertise which is readily available for students in metropolitan areas.

"This helps them to achieve the highest possible marks in the HSC," he told My Daily News.
